HISTORY OF CANOE LAKE

Canoe lake has a long and varied history. It's name probably originated when Alexander Murray's geological survey party built a canoe there in 1853. By the late 1890's the town of Mowat, on the Lake's north shore, was thriving. It had over 500 residents and a lumber mill. Canada's famous landscape artist, Tom Thomson, spent summers working and living on Canoe Lake. In 1917 he was found drowned on Canoe Lake, his canoe washed to shore. His death a mystery still. Many of the cottages that exist today on Canoe Lake are remnants of the past towns and lodges. Today Canoe Lake is the major point for embarking trippers and campers, providing immediate access to the backcountry of the Park. As well, it is surrounded by historic summer cottages and camps. Memories of earlier days in Algonquin Park.

THE PORTAGE STORE

For decades canoeist & trippers have used Canoe Lake as a launching point for their visits into the backcountry of Algonquin Park. In the 1950's a new building was erected to replace the old "Log" store that had been a landmark for years.
